You plan to spend years on your dissertation or thesis...but can you explain it in just three minutes?

Grad Slam is an annual contest in which master’s and Ph.D. students across UC campuses – in disciplines ranging from hard sciences to the arts humanities – compete to sum up their research for a general audience. Students should present the significance and fundamental points of their work at UC Davis in a clear, direct, and interesting manner.

Participants are judged on how well they engage the audience, how clearly they communicate key concepts and how effectively they focus and present their ideas—all in three minutes or less.

Learn more about the competition, its structure, eligibility requirements, preparatory workshops, and other resources at this session.

Workshop Leader: Teresa Dillinger, PhD, Academic Administrator, Professional Development Programs, Graduate Studies
