The literature review is one of the most important and prevalent documents in academic and professional writing. Designed for graduate students earlier in the research process, this workshop will provide an overview of what a literature review is and why we write them. Since one of the hardest parts of writing a review is synthesizing the literature, we will focus on using a spreadsheet to synthesize studies and hands-on activities to help you consider relevant points of comparison across studies. This workshop is half presentation and half writing and discussion.

Instructor: Amy Goodman-Bide is a lecturer in the University Writing Program and a consultant for the UC Davis Writing Across the Curriculum Program. She earned a B.A. in French Language & Literature from Whitman College and an M.A. in Second Language Studies from the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa.
